McKnight is new administrator at Hyland Crest

by LINDA SHUTT
Staff Reporter

In a hastily-called meeting of residents and staff, Hyland Crest's committee of management announced last Friday that Gary McKnight will replace Rheta Jones who is retiring as administrator of the senior citizens' home, effective June 30.

The announcement was made at such short notice that McKnight, currently the county's chief administrative officer, didn't attend because he'd already left for Toronto for the weekend.

Friday's meeting was called after the name of the new administrator - which was to be officially announced this week - was divulged at a Lutterworth council meeting last Thursday night.

The county has not named anyone to replace McKnight.

"I'd say for the year coming up it's a transition year," said George Simmons, who sits on the county's personnel committee.

The committee is interviewing "two or three" candidates but Simmons said the chief administrative officer's job would become "a temporary position until we as county council know where we are going."

In officially announcing McKnight's appointment, county warden Chris Hodgson said he expected a smooth transition at Hyland Crest.

"Gary is familiar with the staff, he has done the job before and is good with people."

McKnight is taking over at a difficult time. Provincial budget cuts threaten health care funding. New provincial standards for administrators and new policies on nursing home care are being implemented.

The home has just lost in arbitration after a long contract dispute with its registered nurses and must now deal with the financial consequences of their 26 per cent salary increase. And negotiations for a new nurses' contract will begin within the next few weeks.

McKnight had previously held the post on a temporary, part-time basis in 1988, between earlier administrators' appointments. He will now hold the position full-time.

"I feel fine about the appointment," McKnight told the Echo after his return to Haliburton. "I know quite a bit about what's going on there. I'm not going in cold."

He said his first tasks would be to meet with residents individually "I know most of them already", and tackle the manual for the government's new accountability policy.

He said he believed he was well qualified for the position. New provincial guidelines for administrators recommend administration and management training

Chester chosen as Tory candidate

More than 1,000 party members voted in a day-long Progressive Conservative convention on Saturday, picking former Lindsay mayor Lorne Chester as the Tory candidate for the riding of Victoria-Haliburton in this year's upcoming federal election.

For the last 27 years the riding has been held by Conservative backbencher Bill Scott, who is stepping down as member of parliament once the next election is called.

Seven party hopefuls gave speeches, shook hands and made promises in the gymnasium of

I.E. Weldon Secondary School, until Chester received the majority of votes cast on the fourth ballot, making him the winner.

Walk for Water event celebrates 10 years

by LINDA SHUTT

There was a youth movement afoot at last Saturday's 10th annual Walk For Water.

Thirty-two of the 64 participants were in the kids category at the fundraiser for the Help A Village Effort. And they were led by the youngest participant, nine-month-old Geravad Feltham, the son of H.A.V.E.'s founder Gerry Feltham.

Bundled up in a woolen hat and quilted jacket, Geravad looked anything but impressed to be joining his Dad's cause.

"We've just come back from Thailand," said Feltham as he and his wife Yuvadee set off on the walk, pushing their son in his stroller.

"Geravad has caught a cold. And he isn't used to having all those clothes on. He's never had a hat on his head!"

Many of the other participants weren't too happy with all the clothing required for the cooler-than-it-should-be June morning.

Yellow ponchos and other rain gear were the order of the day for the 16 km walk, which started under an ominously darkening sky.

But it didn't dampen the spirits of the walkers, who trekked enthusiastically around Lake Kashagawigamog for $10,026 in pledges. All money raised is matched by the Canadian International Development Agency.

"If it isn't rain, it's black fly," said Jody Thompson of Oakville, who has a cottage in Haliburton

Councillor upset at disclosure

by LINDA SHUTT
Staff Reporter

The unscheduled disclosure of Gary McKnight's new appointment has upset councillor George Simmons.

The decision to appoint McKnight as the new Hyland Crest administrator was made June 2 at a meeting of the nursing home's management committee.

A decision was also made to keep the name under wraps until unions and staff had been notified, with an official announcement to be made June 10.

But at a Lutterworth council meeting the day after the decision was reached deputy reeve Jim McMahon confirmed McKnight's appointment after being questioned by other councillors.

"It's caused an awful inconvenience for a lot of members," said Simmons. "I imagine county council ought to ask for an apology from Cam (Ecclestone, Lutterworth reeve) or Jim."

County warden Chris Hodgson said he had to spend all last Friday morning on the telephone explaining what had happened and quickly arranging Friday's meeting to officially announce the appointment.

He was unable to contact McKnight, who was in Toronto for the weekend.

Simmons said he didn't like the fact that the management committee had been forced to make the announcement.

"It bothered me. The man was out of town. The announcement should never have taken place (without McKnight present)," said Simmons.

He said politicians weren't accountable for speculation on the street and McMahon "could have nipped it in the bud by saying the process was taking place."

But McMahon said it wasn't as easy as that.

"I won't lie for anybody. They asked me directly. I said all I could tell them was Gary McKnight had been appointed."

He said councillors had heard conflicting stories and wanted him to confirm that the county council, "wasn't shuffling Gary up to Hyland Crest to get him out of the chief administrator's office."

He said he would apologize at the next county council meeting June 16 if it was in order. But he questioned whether he had breached confidentiality since department heads were at the Hyland Crest meeting.

"If employees know, why shouldn't council?" Simmons said disclosure of personnel matters sent respect for politicians "out of the window."

"It's disappointing the process has broken down."

He said the process of hiring a temporary replacement for Simmons was also being short-changed by speculation on the street while interviews were still taking place.

County's transportation task force on track

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at last Tuesday's meeting of the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee:

Resignations

The committee is faced with an immediate problem of boosting its membership after three people submitted their resignations recently.

Douglas Campbell, Robert Beene and Cliff Blair have bowed out from serving on the committee for various reasons.

Campbell's resignation was not totally unexpected, considering his strong opposition to the committee's recent decision to build 30 long-term care beds at Haliburton Hospital. In his letter to committee chairman Jack Brezina, Campbell says a sacred trust was imposed on the committee to make an investment decision that would result in the best value for the dollar and would serve the largest number of people. However, he believes the committee did not choose the best option and is spending $1.6-million more than necessary to locate the 30 beds in Haliburton. He notes that the capital cost of adding the 30 beds to Hyland Crest in Minden would be considerably less at $2.9-million.

"This irresponsible abuse of public funds is something I cannot support," he says in his letter.

Campbell, who criticized the whole process as a waste of time and money, added that he will observe the committee's proceedings from the public gallery. He was present as an observer at Tuesday's meeting.

Beene's resignation came as somewhat of a surprise to committee members. In his letter, he explains that a change in business commitments have forced him to make his decision. "I do not feel that I can contribute fully to this worthy undertaking," he said.

Blair has told Brezina that because of health problems, he can no longer serve on the committee. Brezina said Blair has offered to continue his participation at a sub-committee level.

The Planning and Development Committee hopes to make a decision on how to go about replenishing its numbers at the June 29th meeting.

Transportation committee

Two of the three resignations from the Planning and Development Committee have left the Transportation Subcommittee without a full load.

Doug Campbell and Cliff Blair both sat on the subcommittee which is examining ways to streamline and improve the transportation system in Haliburton County. Blair has indicated that despite his resignation, he is willing to serve on the subcommittee.

After no one offered to fill the other vacant position, committee co-ordinator Kate Reed reminded members that even though a decision has been made on the long-term care beds, "the committee's work is far from finished."

A new subcommittee member will be decided upon at the next meeting.

Also in transportation news, Reed reported that through a mass mailing, she contacted consumers and service providers for their input. She has received feedback from 25 people.

She has also received nine applications for membership on the Transportation Task Force. The task force, which will consist of committee members, consumers and service providers, is being set up to study ways to improve and finance a more co-ordinated county transportation system. The task force's report is expected in September.

Rising to the top

The committee's recommendation to upgrade and add 30 long-term health care beds to Haliburton Hospital, to relocate Minden Hospital to Hyland Crest and to upgrade Hyland Crest is making its way through the approval process.

The recommendations were sent to the Long-term Care Division in Peterborough and the District Health Council. The Long-term Care Division has already prepared a response to the recommendations.

"We talked about our support for the historical commitment (for the long-term beds in Haliburton)," said Rebecca Harvey, of the Long-term Care Division. "We supported that Hyland Crest be upgraded and that the way for the ministry to support that is to put Hyland Crest on the capital redevelopment list."

The Long-term Care Division is now waiting for the Ministry of Health to prepare an acute-care response. The briefing is expected in the next two to four weeks. The two responses will then be matched up to see if they fit appropriately so that long-term doesn't recommend one thing while acute-care recommends the opposite.

The combined package will then be forwarded to the assistant deputy minister of health.

Warden calls for co-operation and experience.

"I have more than the required now. There are courses that you can take and I'd take them if required."

Simmons, who is chair of Hyland Crest's management committee, told staff and residents that McKnight's greatest qualification was his people skills and appealed to them to work together to maintain the quality of living at the home.

"In this year of transition we need direction and strength from you, the people who live here."

He said the province's economic difficulties would be felt by the nursing home, which gets 70 per cent of its funding from the Ontario government. The remaining 30 per cent, less residents' payments, comes from the county.

"The government is stressing we have to get the best bang for our buck. Sixty-five per cent of the provincial budget is health care. It's health care and education that's going to take the cuts in funding. We all have to see how efficient we can be. The more efficiency, the better we can distribute the money to have the quality of life everyone wants at Hyland Crest."

Hodgson also emphasized the need for co-operation amongst staff, management and residents.

"I want to stress we are all together in this as a team."

In future, management committee meetings will be opened up to get input from staff and residents. He said the move would enable them to dismiss rumors out of hand, because the committee's work and decision-making will be more open.

Hodgson went on to thank Rheta Jones for her work at the home over the last three years.

He also thanked her for extending her scheduled retirement date by three months, helping the home "through a difficult time".

Residents and staff have suffered some uncertainty awaiting the appointment of Jones' replacement as well as the outcome of an efficiency study of the county's departments and staff - the Wace Report - which included Hyland Crest.

The report was expected last month but its publication has been delayed until later this month.

Jones said she was pleased a decision had finally been made and pledged to work with McKnight to ensure a smooth hand-over.

Staff meeting to improve hospital relationships be improved.

"We have the opportunity for doing better. I don't deny there is a perception at Haliburton and Minden they aren't treated properly."

He said he was trying to arrange a meeting at the county hospitals between the medical and administrative staffs of the three hospitals and expects that meeting to take place this month.

The St Joseph's Hospital board met June 2 to review the contents of the report but is not expected to release recommendations before the next board meeting, scheduled for next month.

Chester promises to boost small business of John Diefenbaker, Martin Luther King, and Wayne Gretzky, Chester touched on the familiar planks of the Tory platform.

He promised to work towards balancing the budget and eliminating deficits by reducing the size of cabinet, government departments and by cutting government spending.

"It is obvious that cookie jar is empty," he said.

Chester also emphasized the need to help agriculture, small business and especially tourism, a major source of revenue for the riding.

Representing himself as the law and order candidate, he said that "young offenders, immigrants and special interest groups" must be made aware that with rights come responsibilities and that he would focus more on the latter than the former.

Chester outlined how he would toughen measures aimed at young offenders and eliminate automatic parole for criminals to ensure the security of Canadians.

"The victimization of the majority by the minority must end," he added.

Chester also called for measures to immediately deport non-citizens convicted of serious crimes and to prevent the immigration of those with criminal records or "the baggage of violence."

The other candidates gave speeches with similar themes promoting fiscal restraint and the fostering of small businesses.

hours as the one candidate with the lowest number of votes was automatically dropped from the next ballot and those who couldn't possibly hope to garner enough support weighed their options, swinging their support behind one of the front runners.

It was clear from the first ballot results that this would be a two-candidate race between Chester and his closest rival, Valmay Barkey, executive director of Victoria County Community Care. As more and more candidates dropped out, the gymnasium became split into the two camps, competing with each other for the loudest rally.

But despite the vocal support from both sides, the fourth and final ballot results decided the race, giving Chester 528 votes and Barkey 456.

Committee gives high marks to report cards

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton school board is aiming to make parents more aware and involved in the academic progress of their children.

"We are putting a lot more communication into the report (card) than ever before," said Superintendent of Education Dale Robinson at last week's meeting of the Education Committee.

Robinson explained that the new system of student evaluation for the Transition Years — Grades 7, 8 and 9 — will improve the communication between school and home.

Transition Years restructuring is a provincial government initiative to change the education system so that curriculum and classes are no longer based on perceived student ability. Restructuring includes eliminating advanced, general, and basic levels in Grade 9. The deadline for implementing restructuring is September. School boards have until 1996 to phase in an integrated approach to learning in Grades 7 and 8.

One of the immediate changes will be the way in which students are evaluated. A model for evaluation, submitted by Robinson to the committee, will be recommended for approval at the next school board meeting. If accepted, the model will go into effect in September.

Students will be assessed in eight areas: academic knowledge, performance skills, attitude to learning, sense of responsibility, communication skills, work ethic, punctuality and attendance, and task completion. Starting in 1996, interpersonal skills and co-operative learning skills will also be assessed. The percentage of mark assigned to each area will be different for each subject. Robinson said this method will allow children who are not academically strong to still succeed if they show the right attitude.

Tests and exams will be constructed in three sections: difficult, average, and easy. This will allow students the opportunity to work at their appropriate level of ability. For Grade 9 students, the design of the test will help determine what level of education to pursue in Grade 10. All students must answer the average questions and then decide between the easy and difficult questions. Students who consistently choose to complete the difficult questions and do so successfully, will be recommended for Advanced Level work in Grade 10. Students who choose to do the average and easy questions will also be able to get good marks, however those students will be recommended for Grade 10 General Level.

At the end of a student's high school career, the Ontario transcript, which lists all courses and marks, will indicate that a student was awarded a Grade 9 credit, but the transcript will not show any marks.

Committee members raised a concern over how people will be able to tell the difference between two students who achieve the same marks, but have chosen different routes — one has answered the difficult questions and the other has answered the easy questions.

Robinson said the report cards are being redesigned to include space for written comments. In addition to the marks, teachers will indicate the level of difficulty the students have chosen.

"With that kind of communication, we think the parents will get a clear idea of where their child is at."

Progress reports will be sent out to parents four times a semester (there are two semesters in a year). Parents will be required to sign a tear sheet indicating they have seen the report. The school will call parents if the sheets are not returned.

Throughout the first year of this process, administration will be meeting with the parent advisory group, set up several months ago after parents of Grade 8 students wanted to add their input into the planning of Grade 9 restructuring.

Robinson said he is also encouraging teachers to change their attitudes to testing. Referring to a book called "Making the Grade" which outlines six levels of thinking from the easiest to the most difficult, Robinson said 80 per cent of the tasks and questions posed by teachers fall within the first two levels. He would like teachers to stop teaching to the middle of the class and to redesign their tests so that there is a more balanced spread of questions.

"I'm asking teachers to stretch up the staircase because the higher level of thinking is where the top students can shine and they should be able to shine sometimes."

MINISTRY OF NATURAL RESOURCES PUBLIC NOTICE of a PRESCRIBED BURN

Between mid-June & mid August, the Ministry of Natural Resources will be conducting two prescribed burns in this area for reforestation purposes. The first of these is 15km southeast of Kilmount, about one kilometre northeast of Crystal Lake along the Galway-Cavendish township line. The second is located 15km west of Carnarvon, about one kilometre north of Anson Lake (also known as Montgomery Lake) in Hindon Township. The exact date of these burns will depend on suitable weather conditions and any northern fire-fighting assignments for the Haliburton Fire Centre's crews. The most probable date for the burns is during the last two weeks of July.

If you observe smoke or helicopter activity in the area of these prescribed burns during this period, please do not drive to them for a closer look. Access to the burn sites will be closed, and curious on-lookers will only block traffic and impede the movements of the MNR fire crew. You will be welcome to view the site after the fire has been extinguished.

The purpose of these prescribed burn is to prepare two recently logged areas for the planting of 192,000 white pine, hemlock and spruce in the spring of 1994. For information on this prescribed burn or on other forestry activities in this area, please contact Peter Hynard of the MNR Minden office at (705) 286-1521. For information on the day of the burn, call the Haliburton Fire Centre at (705) 457-2107.

BOE takes stand against violence

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

The following brief reports are of items discussed at last Tuesday's meeting of the school board's Education Committee:

Television violence

The committee is recommending the board support a motion from the Scarborough Board of Education which urges the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to take steps in reducing the amount of gratuitous violence on television.

Scarborough's motion calls on producers and distributors of media to take action on reducing the access of young and adolescent viewers to such media. In a letter to the CRTC, the Scarborough school board notes that "there is increasing evidence that exposure to television violence has a negative influence on children and the often excessively violent behaviour demonstrated by some students appears to be modeled on the types of behaviours presented by the media."

"I agree with them," said Trustee Elsa Louise May at the committee meeting. "There is too much violence on TV and I agree that we should support their motion."

Trustee Craig Pettit said he agreed with May, "but at the same time, I believe parents should be responsible for what their children watch."

Director of Education Brad Saunders reminded the committee that violence is a very real problem in Scarborough schools. But he added that violence is found everywhere and he referred to the local initiatives by teachers to host workshops on the subject.

"I think it would be appropriate to support this anti-violence initiative."

Taking a byte at the computer initiative

Each school in the county has submitted a "computer wish list" to the superintendent of education as part of the board's five-year plan to upgrade computer education.

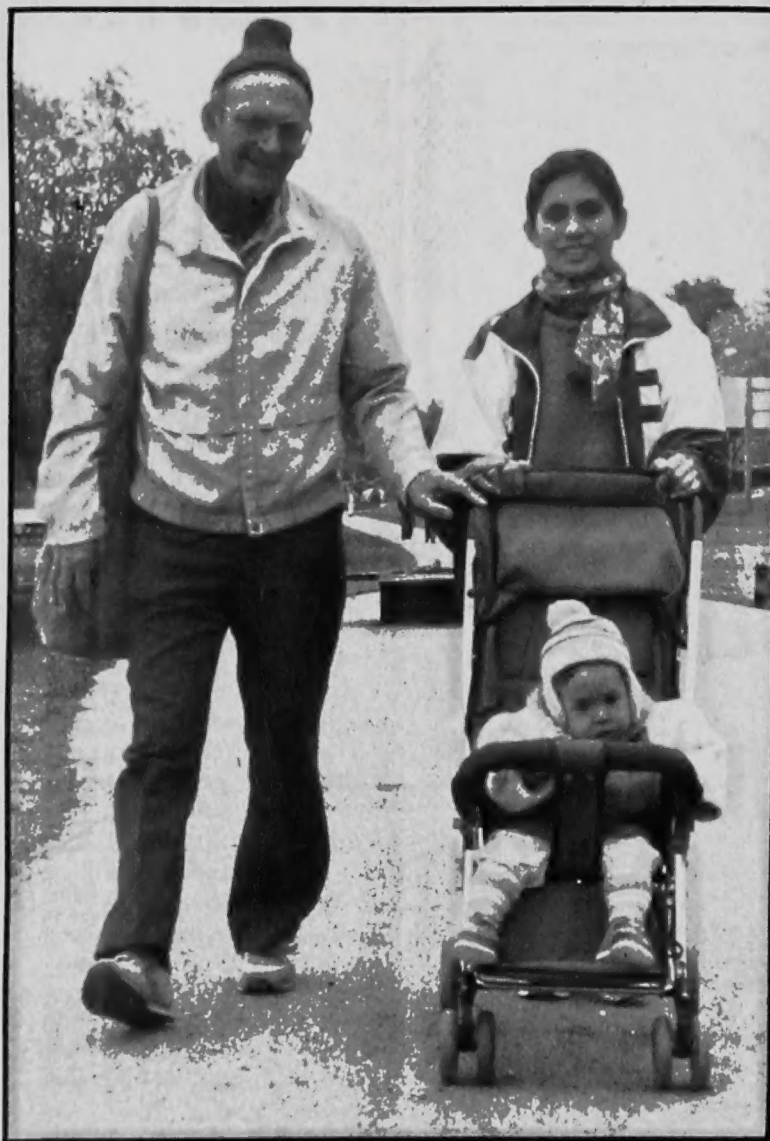

"Now that all this information is together, with visitations to each of the schools, we can come up with a plan for purchase," said Dale Robinson, superintendent of education for the county, who praised the schools' detailed reports.

The computer initiative, which won board approval in March, will cost $855,377 with annual expenditures of approximately $66,860. The goal of the plan is to incorporate the use of computers into all areas of the curriculum and to reduce the computer-to-student ratio from a current 1:11 in high school and 1:15 in elementary schools to at least 1:10.

In order to achieve those objectives, the board must replace outdated hardware and purchase new computers.

Administrative council has been investigating the costs of various types of computer systems and trustees have been touring schools across the province to observe how other boards are integrating computers into their systems.

and was on her fourth walk.

Feltham, who had visited some of the well locations just before returning to Canada last month, said he was gratified to see the walk was still successful after ten years.

"Needless to say this isn't done alone. There are many people who have supported us along the way."

Feltham's travels in India in the early 1980's marked the beginnings of H.A.V.E.. He saw a desperate need for potable water in many of the poverty-stricken villages he visited.

While there he met Reverend K.J. Victor, who came to Haliburton in 1982 at Feltham's invitation to talk about the water shortages in his district in India.

His visit was the catalyst for the formation of the charity organization that has now provided money for more than 100 wells in India and helped finance a medical centre and health program. It has also funded wells in Gambia, West Africa and a pipeline project in Nicaragua.

The seriousness of the cause, and Saturday's weather, didn't mean people couldn't enjoy the day, however.

"I've been doing it since I was two," said Katharine Hagerman, 10.

"We're going to do the whole walk. It's fun."

She was on the walk with friends Kristi Bolin, 10 and Jordana Bain, 11, who rubbed tender tootsies and waited for a boat ride across Lake Kashagawigamog at the half-way point.

Janice Benoit, a Wilberforce teacher, was doing the walk for the third time with daughters Jenna, 9 and Alaina, 12.

"It's good to see so many young people out," said Benoit. "They encourage their friends to come and that's good for the walk."

Perennial walker Ish Lal and his wife Veena raised close to $3,500 on their 10th Walk for Water.

"I try to get businesses to sponsor me. I'm pleased to have raised so much money. The wallets are thinner with the economy the way it is."

The Lal's, who drove up from Lindsay to walk, match any pledges they do get.

Mr. Lal said the wells make a huge difference to the villagers, particularly the women, whose primary task was to get fresh water and were often required to walk for hours to a potable source.

"They now have time for raising their children and for educating themselves."

The rain started to come down with conviction about an hour into the walk, which put a damper on the welcome at the finish line at Head Lake Park, where the folk-rock group Minot Details were hoping to serenade the walkers.

Wearing a green garbage bag as rain gear, Meghan Kennedy, 11, was one of the bedraggled walkers who came in searching for comfort.

Thankfully volunteers were there to dry feet and provide a soothing foot massage for the wet and weary walkers.

"I don't walk, I just want to help out," said teacher Sharon Harrison, as she tackled another in a long line of cold feet.

For the first time in lottery history, we have a five billion dollar winner.

Ontario Lottery Corporation
Société des loteries de l'Ontario

You. And communities across Ontario.

Since 1975, lottery proceeds have been hard at work supporting social service organizations through the Trillium Foundation, cultural and recreational activities and hospitals all across Ontario. Recently, the total surpassed the 5 billion dollar mark.

To celebrate this milestone, the Ontario Lottery Corporation will host a "Free Admission Day" this Civic Holiday (August 2, 1993) at over 45 venues across the province. On that day, the doors to the Art Gallery of Ontario, the Royal Ontario Museum, Science North, Upper Canada Village and more will be open to you at no charge.

Together we have plenty to celebrate. So enjoy. And let's keep up the good work.

Together we're making good things happen.

Stanhope hikes taxes

by JANET HURLEY
Staff Reporter

Taxpayers in Stanhope Township can expect to pay 4.85 per cent more in property taxes despite council's efforts to reduce expenditures by $46,000.

"It was like trying to pour a quart out of a pint bottle," says Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardner. "In all the areas we control, we tried to keep the spending down, but with fewer provincial dollars...."

Stanhope's municipally controlled expenditures, which account for almost 30 per cent of property taxes, will increase by 4.3 per cent. The County of Haliburton and the school board, which make up the remaining 70 per cent of the tax dollar, are set to rise by 3.4 per cent and 5.4 per cent respectively.

"With (the county and school board) covering over 70 per cent, it's hard for the municipality to absorb the increase and come in with nothing," Gardner said.

"It would have been nice to think of a zero-based increase, but once we got into the numbers, there just wasn't anything there to cut."

Gardner said that because Stanhope is a small municipality it provides only the basic services such as landfill, roads and fire protection, and any cut in those services would have a detrimental effect on residents.

Several factors affected the Stanhope budget including a 77 per cent, or $49,615, increase in costs for landfill services. In the past, Stanhope's dump was required to be monitored and tested once a year as part of an agreement with the Ministry of the Environment. But after Stanhope was granted permission to expand its dump site, the ministry ordered three separate tests, all of which had to be paid for by the township.

Also, the purchase of a one unit tractor/mower/snow blower set the township back approximately $50,000 and a $46,376 payment was made on the re-construction of St. Peter's Bridge. With another payment of $46,000 next year, the bridge will be completely paid for before the end of this council's term in office.

THE RUSSIANS ARE COMING, the Russians are...Well, Ukrainian actually. Ukrainian model Serge Tsukanov, 18 (at rear), came to Haliburton last Friday to shoot a jeans ad for the Toronto-based Elliot and Browne modelling agency. He was joined by Toronto models Steven Cescon and Melissa Sibley on locations around town. Photographer Bryan Brown had driven up from the modelling agency's Orlando office to find "small-town Ontario". Haliburton was recommended by Peter Markle of Spruce Lake, a friend of Cescon. Watch out for Haliburton locales to appear in Us Magazine real soon now.

Taking the axe to downtown Minden

by ANDREW MEESON
Staff Reporter

It may seem like a drastic move, but downtown Minden is going to feel the axe this weekend.

No, it isn't more government cutbacks - it's the Minden Timbersport Festival. From 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday Main Street will be closed to traffic and open to lumberjacks and spectators, as an international contingent of timbersport competitors descends on the area, showing off their chops with cross-cut saws, axes and chainsaws.

Entrants will compete in several different categories, including axe throwing, open and mixed cross-cut saw races, bow sawing, pole climbing and, of course, wood chopping, both vertical and horizontal.

But the noisiest events, by far, are the chainsaw competitions. Chainsaw engines are enlarged, with carburetors altered - anything to make the machine cut faster.

And in the open modified category, anything goes.

"If you can carry it, you can use it," says Pat Murphy, one of the organizers. "It's a real crowd pleaser."

When it's all over, Minden should have enough toothpicks to last a year.

Those serious about the sport follow circuits of timbersport festivals in the States and especially New Zealand and Australia, competing for prize money. Over 30 entrants from Canada, the U.S. and possibly New Zealand are expected to compete in the events.

Not surprisingly given such determination, the equipment used has become highly specialized. Axes specially designed for various types of timber can cost as much as $250. Cross-cut saws, with custom-made teeth can set a buyer back between $800 to $1,200.

"These guys are serious about what they do," added Murphy.

To sweeten the pot, more than $3,000 in prize money will be up for grabs, making the Minden festival one of the biggest in Ontario.

"The county developed on the logging industry," said Joe Outram, a member of the executive for the Ontario Timbersport Association and a seasoned veteran of festivals in Ontario and the States. "So we're getting back to its roots - and it's an excellent spectator sport."

With an expected crowd of 2,000-3,000 watching, it'll be enough to make a beaver turn green with envy.

Proposed helmet law would be difficult to enforce, say OPP

by ANDREW MEESON
Staff Reporter

Warm days and nights in Haliburton herald the beginning of another summer, and with it the proliferation of cyclists in the county. A larger number of bicycles also spells an increase in the danger of bicycling accidents. Proposed government legislation making helmet use mandatory for bicyclists, which is expected to be passed by the provincial legislature in 1994, is designed to reduce the number head injuries caused by cycling accidents in the province.

But in Haliburton county, the law may not have much impact.

Enforcement of a helmet law will be difficult for the local police. Sgt. Steve Adam of the Minden OPP says he doesn't think there's much sense to legislating helmet use unless it is accompanied by strict penalties. Adam's force will be responsible for laying charges under the law once it is passed. Existing bicycling laws are infrequently enforced because the costs outweigh the benefits.

He gives the example of a $6 fine for riding after dark without a light. "It probably costs the judicial system $75 to process it. What's the sense?" Even if a fine is levied, it's not enough to act as a deterrent.

Once the helmet legislation becomes law, Adam says, it will be enforced "in a priority situation," meaning police will probably warn offenders rather than necessarily charging them.

While Adam says he supports the wearing of helmets, he would prefer to see a mandatory training and licensing program for all bicycle riders. "It's unfortunate the government has to legislate against stupidity," he said, "But they do."

Opposition to the helmet law has been muted thus far, with opponents charging everything from infringement of right to choose to arguments over it placing an additional unfair economic burden on those who can least afford it.

Victoria-Haliburton MPP Dennis Drainville is a vocal supporter of the proposed legislation. He thinks that with the equally strong support for the bill in the provincial legislature from all parties, it will be passed.

Drainville dismisses the arguments that it is an infringement of the freedom to choose. "I just don't buy that," he said.

For him, the benefits to personal safety outweigh the cost of the loss of choice.

As owner of a Haliburton sporting goods store that sells helmets, Glen Sharpley also doesn't think much of this argument. "Is it an infringement of your rights to have to wear seatbelts? I don't think so," he said. "Why not be safe?"

According to Drainville, economic arguments that helmets are an extra expense being forced on those who can't afford it don't hold much water either. "I don't think it's a tax," he said. "I call it good sense."

Sharpley's sports store now encourages customers to buy a bicycle helmet when they purchase a new bike. But many balk at spending the extra cash.

"People are thrifty about the wrong things," he said. "They'll spend $400 or $500 on a bicycle and then only $20 on a helmet." He finds that most buy a helmet based on price, which he says is "dead wrong."

All commercially available bicycle helmets must pass the crash test standards set by the Snell laboratories in the United States, which also conduct the tests for motorcycle helmets. Test standards for bicycle helmets are not as rigorous as those for motorcycling, because of the difference in riding conditions.

Contrary to what some people believe, helmets are not designed

A little understanding goes a long way

Summer has arrived in Haliburton County, heralded as always by the mixed blessings of warm breezes and ravenous blackflies, tranquil sunsets and crowded highways, thronging streets and tested patience. Dreams of summer reawaken with the strengthening sun of March, and the two months between its first portents and its unofficial arrival on the May 24 long weekend, can seem interminable. For many local business owners, the wait is more than ever fraught with anxiety. Three years into recession, local businesses face an uncertain future. Few are thriving. Most are merely surviving. All need the stimulus of a busy summer to revive their spirits, reduce their bank loans and gain a little more time to ride out this intractable, interminable downturn.

If anticipation of summer runs high among local business people, so too does the level of stress brought on by the influx of summer visitors and cottagers.

Over the past year or two, local business owners have been grappling with the reality of shrinking revenues and rising costs. None who have remained in business have failed to take action. For most, the recession has meant struggling to do as much, or more, with fewer resources. It has meant a relentless personal battle to remain positive and optimistic when pessimism and negative news are rampant. It has meant self doubt, nagging fear and the painful process of reflecting on one's limitations and inner strengths. Is the battle to stay in business, to employ people, to serve the community, worth fighting? If the price is one's health, spirit, serenity, is it worth paying?

Business ownership can be a lonely calling, perhaps never more so than now, when so many forces beyond individual control are damaging everyone's prospects for a brighter future.

Sadly, the stresses business owners are undergoing are made worse by the gulf that separates those who risk their capital and pay the high personal price of small business ownership, from many of those who do not. The evidence of the gulf between politicians and entrepreneurs, between proprietors and union leaders, between those who create wealth and those who demand a growing share of it, is abundant and discouraging in provincial affairs. But in more subtle but no less significant ways, the gulf is just as evident in Haliburton County as well.

A recent issue of The Echo included a Letter to the Editor from someone who was unhappy with the level of service they encountered in a local business on the May 24 holiday weekend. The letter writer urged local business people to be better prepared, to hire and train more staff, to ensure that service is always provided promptly and with a smile. The writer's perspective is, of course, that of a consumer, and it is justified if you hold it to be an absolute truth that the customer is always right. It isn't, because they are not.

If local communities were as busy in April and November, or for that matter, on May 30, as they are on May 24, few local businesses would be as constrained as they are. They would be bigger and more prosperous. The reality, however, is that businesses which might see only a handful of customers a day for most of the year, must suddenly cope with a ten or twenty or fifty-fold increase in business on a few summer weekends. They can't hire enough staff to deal with that amount of business in the manner that some consumers demand, because quite simply, the relationship between costs and revenues precludes it.

What's needed now, more than ever, is an understanding of reality. Consumers want knowledgeable, courteous service. Most of them will find it as often in Haliburton as elsewhere. The difference is that on summer weekends, they may have to wait a little longer to receive it than they would on a rainy day in October. Business people who are indifferent to their customers do not survive recessions. But consumers who think that businesses can double or triple their staff in the summer and meet the payroll and all the other associated costs on revenues from three long weekends, don't know much about business.

A little bit of understanding would go a long way to making life on both sides of the counter, a lot more pleasant. L.P.

Community will miss valued friend

To the Editor:

While in Haliburton attending the funeral of my brother-in-law, Creighton Feir, I realized that on May 19, 1993, much more was lost than what Creighton meant to each of us who were related to him. The numbers of people who attended at the funeral home and the church attest to the popularity, and respect that this man earned from the people with whom he came in contact during his lifetime in Haliburton.

Creighton loved the Haliburton Highlands and he will be missed as the one man Chamber of Commerce who never stopped praising and promoting the many virtues of his hometown and surrounding community to permanent and summer residents alike.

Creighton also loved his work, and never counted or regretted the hours he spent doing what Creighton did best - communicating with people in a style that will never be duplicated.

Many times, while visiting in Haliburton, the only time I would see Creighton would be a glance of him running down the street, probably trying to "catch up" after spending too long in one place talking when he should have been somewhere else. Many people will now be glad he spent that extra time - providing memories that will linger for a long time.

I can't remember ever telling Creighton in so many words how much I valued the friendship, compassion and understanding that he showed as my brother-in-law. I can only hope now that he took that for granted in the same way that I took him for granted. - He will be missed.

R.G. Elstone.

Life is fleeting

To the Editor:

Remembering Creighton Feir

When the Echo arrives, I check out two features immediately. They are Pic of the Past and Feir Play. Probably because both belonged to Creighton Feir who each week connected me to my home town.

The most eloquent testimony to Creighton was the symbolism of his unwritten column of May 25, 1993. It reminds us what a gift life is and how

Tories learn lesson in high school politics

MEESON'S
MUSINGS

ANDREW MEESON

With the number of brightly-colored balloons festooning the walls of the high school gym last Saturday, an outside observer could be forgiven for assuming I.E. Weldon was holding its graduation ceremonies.

More than 1,000 people swirled through the halls and gymnasium of the building, some seated in folding chairs, others gathered in knots discussing who was with whom.

Over it all, a carnival ambience prevailed.

Inside the gym as the balloting results were announced the stifling atmosphere thickened with the heat from the crush of bodies swarming the floor waiting for the word. There was even a country and western band in one corner playing songs like "Achy Breaky Heart" at full volume while the faithful in opposing camps waved signs and danced in the aisles.

But these were not students in Weldon's hallowed halls - these were members of the Progressive Conservative party association for the riding of Victoria-Haliburton. They weren't asking for dances or dates, they were canvassing for political support for their candidate, offering tables of food washed down by soft drinks. The drink of choice was, naturally, President's Choice (P.C.) cola.

It had all the trappings of a democratic political event, but with one key difference: as befits a party nomination function, all hopefuls came from the same side of the political spectrum and all held the same fundamental beliefs.

Party conventions, regardless of political stripe, often resemble a case of preaching to the converted - long on rhetoric and short on substance.

Candidate after candidate outlined their agendas for fiscal restraint and boosting small business, touchstones of small-c conservatism.

One member from Lindsay, who supported the eventual winner, said he liked the other major contender, but that her policies were "more socialistic" than the others. Given the narrow range of rhetoric espoused on the stage during the speeches, it probably did seem close to socialism to have some policies that defending senior citizens.

socialist New Democratic Party chants the phrase deficit reduction like a mantra, it didn't come as a shock that no one questioned these assumptions.

One wonders where real political debate with real choices now lies.

By the time the final ballots were counted, the high school graduation resembled a high school dance, as surviving candidates lured votes from supporters of the less fortunate ones.

While the balloons multiplied with each successive ballot, the options narrowed to a choice between two. It looked for all the world like a high school pep rally. As the final results were announced, each candidate's name elicited screaming and shouting from their respective camps. The dance had become a high school pep rally.

Finally, the candidate with what looked like the biggest, most carefully orchestrated campaign won the necessary majority. By the time the 6 p.m. final ballot results were announced, the numbers voting had dropped by 200, victim of the overbearing heat and disappointment.

As one supporter of an early casualty in the race said to me, "They're all good candidates - it's too bad somebody has to win and somebody has to lose."

Observations of life when bugs are biting and bugging

CITY SLICKER
DAVID CARROLL

PINE POINT, KENNISIS LAKE: June is the cruelest month. Take it from me: the sacrificial lamb. I've got mosquito bites up and down my arms, and sores on my ankles from where I've scratched too hard. So far this spring, I've lost a third of my plasma, not to mention the odd appendage. As a result, this column will revolve around a series of observations rather than the usual (am I flattering myself here?) cohesive theme. I'd have spent more time on it, but I've too busy plastering band-aids to my face. You know how it is. Stupid needlenosed varmints.

Observation #1: Is it just me, or is it getting increasingly difficult to travel through Haliburton County without being accosted by the dreaded Yard Sale? Last weekend, Susanne and I counted sixteen of the things between Kinmount and West Guilford. Somehow we managed to hang on to our wallets. I bought a tortilla press for $4, a Stompin' Tom Connors CD for $3, a hardcover copy of Timothy Findley's "The Wars" for $2, and a Pop-A-Matic Trouble game for a loonie. That's all. Susanne was equally good: she bought a mahogany butter box and a pair of knitting needles. Just outside Minden, we came across a little girl selling lemonade from a metal card table. We asked for two cups, and the child poured them out. It was sour. Susanne gave the little girl a dollar and told her politely to keep the change. The waif looked up at her big brother, and, observing his hearty approval, accepted the tip with astonished eyes.

Said Susanne: "It doesn't take much to make a kid happy."

Green Thumbs Unite: Do annuals really grow bigger in the highlands? Mom says yes, Andy says no. They're competing to see whose geranium grows largest. Two weeks into the botanical campaign, Andy's plant in Toronto is winning by a stoma. I'll keep you updated as the leaves unfold.

Methane, Anyone? All cottage humour emanates from the septic tank. Floorboards may warp and pumps may explode, and cottagers will not so much as giggle. But just one leak from the beloved Septic, and the entire lake is awash with jokes. Case in point: the other day, I caught Ron Dupre yammering about some poor soul's tank, down on Wilkinson Drive. "The guy had to clear a plus," said Ron. "Had to shove his whole arm in and everything."

"That's nothing," Dad boasted. "You should've seen the time our septic backed up into the bathtub."

It is a memory we wish we could flush away. Mom tilted her head out of embarrassment. "Charming, Derek," she said. "Absolutely charming."

Summer Humour: Q: What's Irish and sits in the sun? A: Paddy O'Furniture.

We Didn't Want Your Lousy Cup Anyway: "Praise the Lord and pass the pretzels," said Ormel Wilby, when the Maple Leafs finally fell to the Kings. (Ormel, by the way, made a thousand dollar bet that the Leafs wouldn't win a Stanley Cup this century.) When it was suggested to him that the Buds still had six seasons to go before the turn of the millennium, and that Cliff Fletcher was determined to build a contending team, Ormel calmly licked the salt off his lips. "Don't worry about me," he said with a shrug. "I've been known to live on the edge."

Ecology Alert: The other day, while riding the Queen Streetcar, I spotted a beaver; swimming up the Don River. Feeling somewhat stunned by the spectacle (The Don, after all, was recently named "Most Noxious Waterway" by Fecund Feces magazine), I nudged the shoulder of my foul-breathed seatmate. He sighted the animal and shook his head. "Stupid rodents," he muttered. "Don't they know when to die?"

And Another Thing: So far this season, the Carroll clan has spotted a bear, two deer, six turtles and an otter (unconfirmed). Also: the frogs are back. Late at night, up at the road, you can hear their soft chorus rising out of the dark. It sounds like a cross between crickets and new age. Good old frogs. Here's hoping they gobble up a few o' them 'skeeters.

See you next week, when the swelling goes down.

Pic of the Past

This scene might resemble something out of a 1960's police series -- say, Dragnet -- but it's actually a photo taken in 1969, and the three clean cut young men (whose names we couldn't discover) are not aspiring detectives but Bell Canada employees. This corner of Mountain and Highland Streets in Haliburton looks quite different today. The former Bell building behind the three men is now incorporated into the development completed a few years ago by Mike and Linda Easton. It is now occupied by a video store, with Mingles below. The home beside the Bell building was that of Berkley and Gertrude Feir. It was purchased by the Eastons and moved to the corner of Harmony Road and Hwy 118 to make room for the main street development.

Hank 'n Henry chill out

DOWN OUR ROAD
SHARON LYNCH

HENRY WAS DRIVING HOME EARLY one day when he saw the two friends out for a walk. "There goes Hank," he thought, as he passed the two strolling along the side of the road. "I guess that's how Hank and I look when we're out and about." Hearing the familiar wheeze of Henry's truck as it went by, Hank lifted his head in recognition.

Hank had been caught unawares. Henry was not due home for at least an hour by which time Hank would have been back in the yard waiting for him. There was nothing Hank could do now except make his way home as fast as he could.

Henry was sitting out on his porch, enjoying a cool drink in the shade, when Hank strolled purposefully up the drive. As he approached the porch, he began wagging his tail in greeting. Henry reached down and rubbed the sleek ears, talking to the black lab at the same time. He apologized to Hank for making him cut his walk short with Mitzi the collie. Hank didn't really seem upset.

The reason he was home early, Henry explained, was he had to go look for a small lake and he thought Hank would like to come along. At this the dog's body tensed. He liked the word "walk" and the tone of Henry's voice was encouraging. Hank knew from experience that whenever Henry came home early, it usually meant a change in the routine. Sometimes the change was not for the better, like the time it was to put Hank in the house and leave him there with a note for the neighbour. But other times his early arrival meant a truck ride or a special walk.

Hank padded over to the water bowl, sucking up the tepid water before turning toward the truck where Henry waited with the door open. In two bounds the black lab was up on the seat, his head out the passenger's side. With a laugh, Henry pulled his door shut and the two set off on a short trip. In fifteen minutes Henry pulled over onto the side of the road and he and Hank left the truck, heading through an open field.

Henry had made a statement to a friend in the heat of the moment and now had to see it through. Despite his friend's disbelief, Henry had sworn that this parcel of land contained a large beaver pond at the very back and that it was a mecca for moose in the area. To prove he was right, Henry had even brought along his camera. If he should be lucky enough to include a moose in the snapshot, so much the better. But a photo alone should be enough to win the ten dollar bet. It wasn't the money anyway that was at stake. It was the principal of the thing. Henry knew his country and he would not let anyone tell him otherwise.

Despite being late afternoon, the sun was still warm in early June and Henry began feeling the heat almost immediately. But he dared not remove his shirt because of the black flies. The bugs were not bothering Hank yet, but his tongue started hanging from the side of his mouth soon after the two of them had crossed the field. Henry began to wonder if he should have left the dog at home.

After the field they headed into the bush, walking down an old overgrown logging road. In places it was hard to make out the trail, but the new leaves provided welcome shade. Unfortunately they also provided mosquitoes. But Henry and Hank continued on, Hank snapping at the odd deer fly and Henry waving a cedar branch around his own face as they trudged over knolls, river beds and moss covered stumps.

Just about the time Henry began to wonder if he had confused this piece of land with another, he spied the beaver pond. Behind it rose the cliffs of dolomite just as he had described it to his friend, so he knew a photo would win him the bet and make his point. Unfortunately Hank had also seen the pond at about the same time. Before Henry could stop the usually obedient dog, Hank had made a bee line for the pond and was up to his belly in the smelly black water.

Shrugging in resignation, Henry decided that the walk back to the truck would at least allow Hank some drying time. Besides, he reasoned, the dog was hot and lobs love water, any kind of water. So in a matter of minutes everything seemed back under control as Hank answered Henry's whistle with a wet gallop to his side. Hank appeared cooler and happy to make the return trip.

Then he saw the pile of bear dung on the big flat rock close to where they had passed only a minute ago. Hank didn't know how he had missed it the first walk by but he had no intention of doing so again. By the time Henry realized what he was planning, Hank was on his back, rubbing the stuff all over himself in dog ecstasy. Henry yelled and he stopped, getting up and giving himself a brief shake.

Henry's face was red and he continued shouting at Hank. The dog wished Henry had also gone for a swim in the pond. It might have cooled him off so he would not be so red in the face.

That was the problem with humans, Hank decided as the two of them made their way back to the truck: they did not know how to have a good time when they went for a walk.

NORTHERN LIGHTS
VIRGINIA MUENZEL

THE WEATHER FORECASTERS have reluctantly acknowledged that it's probably going to be another cool, damp summer, a prospect that strikes fear into the heart of the tourist industry, from the small village grocers to the most glamorous inns. But the weather, whatever it does, won't do Haliburton as much harm as that one short letter to the editor in last week's Echo, about the lack of service over the Victoria Day weekend.

If there's one thing I've learned about small town living, it's that word of mouth rules. The letter writer sent a clear message. Something went wrong. Maybe she and her guest hit all the wrong places. Surely every shop and restaurant can't be that bad. I know a lot of business people are running scared this year. They made it through the un-summer of '92 by a hair's breath. Another bad summer could wipe out half the town.

But if everyone cuts back on their help so far that tourists are left standing around, they'll turn around, walk out the door, and right up Highway 35 to Muskoka.

The letter implies a second chance. Haliburton has less than a month to find the solution. There are a lot of people out there looking for work. Employers can have their pick. Choose someone who smiles. Someone energetic, who likes people, and life, and doesn't think he's doing you a favor by showing up. If the first person you hire doesn't know how to keep busy, or how to treat customers, dump them and hire someone else. If you find an employee who is obviously exceptional, give them a little raise, or a bonus. That person will bring you enough business to compensate for it.

The letter writer is right on the mark about training your staff. The first employee a customer meets creates the good or bad impression that will send him away for all time, or bring that customer back to your establishment with friends.

For me, it's the difference between a smile and a sullen face. I want to be waited on by positive people. I don't care if it's the most miserable day of the year. If a clerk or waiter can say something pleasant to lift my spirits; if they take the trouble to help me find what I want, without being pushy, and if they remember to let me know they appreciate by business, (as in, "Thank you for shopping

Getting down to business

Iwrote about being "politically correct" a few weeks back, and the subject then had primarily to do with the choice of words. The subject has, of course, many more dimensions than that.

There has been a great deal in the past week to do with making places accessible to the handicapped, which I applaud, but there is also a certain craziness that seems to gum up the works in so many of these areas.

Over the years, there have been discussions in this column as well as on the streets of Haliburton, I can assure you — on the subject of the availability (or lack thereof) of public washrooms for people who overstay their time in town shopping.

A couple of years ago, I got a lot of attention from sympathetic readers who knew the problem when I quoted a by-law passed by a council on Cape Cod. There, they solved the privy problem by decreeing that anyone applying for a beach permit must show that they have brought along their own portable toilet!

The politically correct dimension came to mind when I saw a television feature about a modern version of the French street latrine — a convenience provided on Paris streets for generations.

The new version is a completely automated one-stall bathroom in its own little kiosk. Successfully in use now in Paris to replace the primitive facilities of the past, it was being tested in the streets of New York City — which has the same problems in this case as the streets of Haliburton Village...

It costs a quarter to unlock the door to a clean one-stall john — stainless steel, low to the floor, no seat — plus a sink and an air hand dryer. When you leave, the toilet folds back into the unit and is scalded with hot water and steam, then dried and put back in place for the next customer.

It's clean, neat, safe, sanitary and cheap to use

T-ball means summer fun for kids & parents

More than 200 Haliburton area youngsters turned out last Wednesday night for the first night of minor baseball. As these photo's show, a good time was had by all!

The hats were a little big and the shorts a little roomy, but that only added to the joy of summer as the T-ball season got underway

Junior shines at OFSSA

by ANDREW MEESON

Three personal best showings and a sixth place finish for the Haliburton Highlands competitors were the highlights of the all-Ontario secondary school track and field finals held in Oshawa last Friday and Saturday.

Anna Tomlinson scored two personal best results in the junior girls' long and triple jump, at 4.93 m and 10.37 m respectively, placing her in the top half of the 24 competitors in her category.

Coach Paul Morissette was pleased by Tomlinson's performance, saying that it shows how much she will be capable of next year. "She's a first year junior, so it looks promising for her," he said. "She'll be in the same age category next year and is only going to get even better."

Chris Greenfield placed sixth in the finals of the senior boys' 400 m, with a time of 49.8 sec, showing that he, "handled the pressure a lot better this year," according to Morissette.

The boys 4 x 100 m relay team, that included Greenfield, Andy Bacon, Jason Simmons and Shane Sisson, managed a personal best time of 45.0 sec, despite not qualifying for the final.

"At this level the competition is really strong," said Morissette, who considered some of the competitors to be of Olympic calibre.

"A number of the kids there you'll see in Atlanta in 1996."

Endres Weber was the victim of unfortunate circumstances when the pole vault competition was first delayed because of rain and extremely high winds and finally was canceled altogether. At the senior boys' level, competitors "jump so high in the air it really can be dangerous," said Morissette.

This was the first time this had happened and meet organizers hadn't made alternate plans to hold the vent indoors.

HALIBURTON WINS

SWEET VICTORY: In a tough match against the Midland Strikers, Haliburton's soccer team scored their first win of the season. The victory moved them out of the basement in the Muskoka League standings.

Helmets give cyclists a fighting chance to remain whole under impact, but should actually break up, dissipating the force of the impact, leaving the head undamaged.

As a doctor of family medicine in Haliburton for the last five years, Dr. Norm Bottum said he "can't recall seeing a head injury in Haliburton" as a result of a bicycling accident. Most of the injuries he treats related to cycling are minor cuts and scrapes.

He said the Ontario and Canadian Medical Associations have both urged the use of bicycle helmets for the last three years. "Most bike accidents throw the rider forward, like a missile," he said. In those cases, the head protectors have proven effective.

But while all helmets are created to protect equally during an accident, some are more equal than others.

Basic models are made of standard Styrofoam, which Sharpley says tends to chip and break easier than the high density "Gecet" foam found in the higher end helmets. The more expensive ones have additional benefits, such as air vents specifically designed to increase airflow across the head, which becomes "extremely important in 98 degree weather riding in the mountains all day," said Sharpley.

Once legislation is passed he thinks the price of the equipment eventually will drop, as "every Tom, Dick and Harry will get into the picture," making more helmets available.

Bicycle helmets are not totally without fault, said Drainville, but they're better than the alternative. "There's no guarantee it will totally protect, but it gives a fighting chance."

Soccer team scores first victory with shut out

by LINDA SHUTT

In an aggressive, well-played match last Sunday, the Haliburton men's soccer team finally put one in the win column.

The team had gone 0 for 4 in this season's play in the Muskoka District Soccer League, but beat Midland, 2-0.

"We were outplayed in our first match against Collingwood, but since then our only problem has been that we couldn't score," said Christoph Carl, a player for the team.

On Sunday, Haliburton took care of that difficulty early when Cecil Smith put the ball in the net in the first five minutes.

A second goal by Hans Walter followed before the end of the first half and although Midland pressed hard they were unable to score.

"We've got some good young players. It's a good team this year," said Carl.

Haliburton plays at home again this Sunday against Orillia.

The match is at 1 p.m. at the high school.

Club teaches family the joy of horses

by LINDA SHUTT
Staff Reporter

IT HAPPENS TO EVERY PARENT. Your young child crawls up on to your lap, puts soft, gentle arms around your neck and whispers "Can I have a pet?"

Okay. Maybe a cuddly, furry kitten? A bright, sparkling goldfish, safe in its bowl?

No, what your kid has in mind is about eight feet tall and weighs over a thousand pounds.

When Brian Laurantaye's son first asked for a horse, the father was dubious. Mr. Laurantaye, an OPP constable in Minden, had grown up a city boy, in Ottawa. He didn't know much about horses.

He tried to dissuade his four-year-old son, Brock.

But three years later, having waited almost half his lifetime, Brock wanted to know how old he had to be before his dream became a reality.

Mr. Laurantaye and his wife Wendy, who owns the Dreams Come True Stained Glass studio in Minden, decided to take their son's request more seriously. Mrs. Laurantaye's parents owned a riding stable when she was a child, but it was 20 years since she'd been around horses. And her husband's experience was limited to an occasional stable ride in Ottawa as a youth.

"We needed some information, some help to find the right horse and how to care for it," said Mr. Laurantaye.

What he's discovered in the four years since Brock got his horse, is a wealth of knowledge and information about horses right here in Haliburton County.

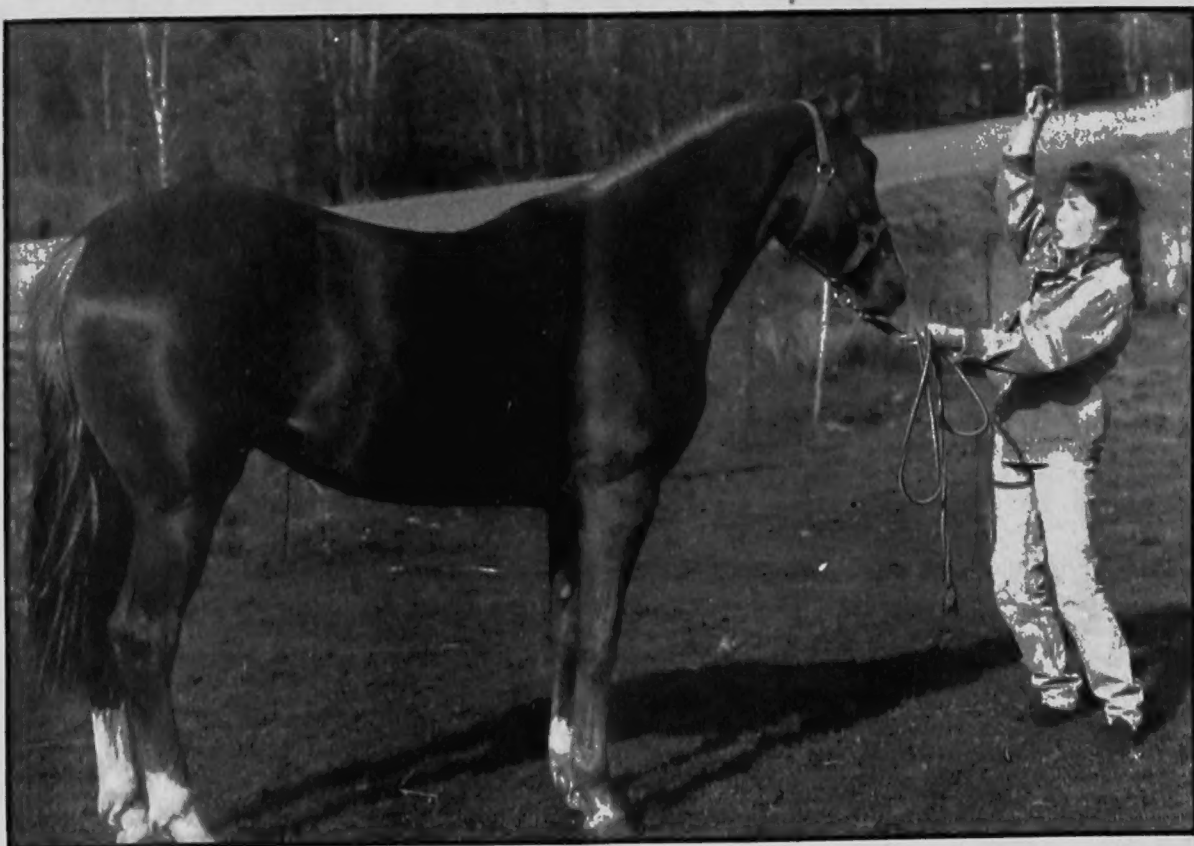

Now, he is president of the Haliburton County Horsemen's Association, founded two months ago to make that information available to all horse lovers in the county.

The new club has its roots in the Equestrian Club, formed in the mid-1980s by Minden teenager Tina Cox. Cox and a few friends with a shared interest in show horses, used the club mainly as a means of meeting other Haliburtonians at shows and co-ordinating their travel plans.

The Laurantayes bought their first horse, Lady, a 13-year-old quarterhorse, through contacts at the Equestrian Club. Since then they've learned a lot about horses from club members. But they also found a lot of people in the area outside the club, willing to share a lifetime knowledge of horses.

The club has changed its name because the original name made many people think it was restricted to owners of show horses.

"The club is for people with a common interest in horses of all kinds," said Mr. Laurantaye.

HORSE PLAY: Sarah Laurantaye, 13, encourages her Morgan show horse, Trillium Classic, to display his show stance. Sarah has learned her horse-handling savvy from members of the Horsemen's Association.

"There are a lot of owners in Haliburton County and we want to bring them together."

The local vet, Laurie Brown, has more than 150 clients with horses and Mr. Laurantaye thinks there are a lot more owners in the county who would benefit from meeting with other horse lovers.

Tina Cox, now Tina Gilligan, agrees with the change. She said a lot of people felt excluded by the word equestrian.

"It made them think of the stuff you see on T.V. — the show jumping events — and there are a lot of people in Haliburton who just want to ride trails, or who have draught horses. This change opens it up to everyone."

Brian Laurantaye hopes the club will help people like himself who want a horse but are nervous about what is involved and how to get advice.

The club will be holding clinics on subjects ranging from buying feed to first-aid in the barn. Mr. Laurantaye said he also hopes to arrange day trips. He's trying to set up a visit to E. P. Taylor's famous thoroughbred farm, Windfield, near Oshawa.

But mostly organizers want the club to be a source of advice and encouragement to horse lovers.

IT'S a warm, blue-sky, spring morning. The two-storey, weathered wood barn stands in a blaze of early morning sun, surrounded by rolling green fields. A nearby pond lies still and silent, overlooked by a white-blooming fruit tree. Inside the dimly-lit barn, Brian Laurantaye, in jeans and a checked shirt, crouches over a metal bowl, mixing feed.

The oats and bran and molasses smell good, blending with the usual barn smells of hay and horse manure.

Lazer, a two-year-old quarterhorse, thrusts an inquisitive nose through a small gap in the back of his stall. He's impatient for breakfast.

It's a daily routine for the Laurantaye family. Two trips a day to the barn to feed and clean and visit with their horses.

"There's a sense of calm and quiet here, caring for God's creatures," says Wendy Laurantaye. "You can't hurry the horses to eat, so we have a half-hour each morning of peacefulness."

It's a pleasure shared by all the family including Brock, now 11, Sarah, 13, and Ryan, 15.

The Laurantayes have three horses now. Their first horse, Lady, is the mother of Lazer. He's Brock's horse. Standing next to Lazer, in a third stall, is Classic, a 12-year-old Morgan, ridden in shows by Sarah.

Everyone works together to clean the barn, and feed and groom the horses.

And this year, May mornings are filled with the excitement of waiting for an addition to the family of horses. Lady, now 17, is expecting another foal. The newcomer will be Ryan's horse.

"See the softening of the muscles in the rump here," says Mrs. Laurantaye, running her hand over Lady's supple back. "And the build up of a waxy fluid at the teat. Those are signs the foal is due very soon."

She speaks with a quiet authority.

How did a family with no horses, and admittedly concerned about owning one, travel the road to a barn with three animals, and the calm confidence they show waiting for a fourth?

"We couldn't have done it without neighbours," says Mr. Laurantaye. With the horses chomping their feed, he pulls out hay bales and sits down to talk, sipping his morning coffee.

Ferriers, feed, foals. They've all been learned about from a network of experienced owners around the county.

For Wendy Laurantaye it's meant the completion of a childhood experience.

Her parents took on a riding stable when they moved up to Carnarvon from Winona some thirty years ago. They had no experience with horses.

Horsemen's club shares know-how with novices es and, with six daughters to raise, it was a struggle to keep the business going. They sold it when their daughters left for college.

Twenty years later Mrs. Ladurantaye can recall some of the work she did, caring for the horses. Now she is learning WHY she did it.

"Like fluffing the hay before feeding it to the horses. I remember having to do it. I never knew why. Now I know it's to get the dust out of the stored hay. Horses can get allergies and lung infections from dusty hay."

They've learned a lot of other things too.

For example: cost. A good horse -- "get a well-mannered one" -- can be bought for anywhere between $1,000 and $5,000.

"For $5,000 you would get a REALLY good horse," says Mr. Ladurantaye.

A trained Morgan show horse like Classic would cost around $2,500.

The Morgan is a versatile breed, good for shows, bush or trail riding or as a work horse. It has heavier legs and deeper chest than the North American-bred quarterhorse.

Quarterhorses were bred for cutting cattle, and are good for short-distance speed, with finer legs and a less sturdy build than the Morgan.

The Ladurantayes will be sending 2-year-old Lazer to a horse farm near Uxbridge later this month for training.

He's now about the right age to be ridden and Brock will also spend a couple of weekends with his horse, learning proper riding techniques.

Training and boarding Lazer will cost about $300 a month for the two months of schooling.

"It's taken a lot of careful financial planning, and the kids saving all they can," says Mrs. Ladurantaye.

For practical help in handling the young, untrained Lazer, they've turned to neighbours such as Sinclair Nesbitt, who has been working and breeding Belgians on his farm near Minden for close to 40 years.

"Horses are like a family of kids," he says. "You have to raise 'em right. Sometimes you have to be a little tough."

It was Mr. Nesbitt who showed the Ladurantayes how to curb Lazer's habit of rearing when he was on the halter by putting him in the sand, and letting him rear up. And when he's rising up, take him onto his back into the sand.

Mr. Nesbitt likes the idea of the club expanding to include all types of horse owners. "Even at my age there's something I can learn" and it's good to get kids involved and teach them about caring for a horse.

Another source of information for the Ladurantayes has come from Haliburton farmer Harvey McIntosh, who has a lifetimes experience working horses on his land.

"We want to get people like Harvey and Sinc to our club meetings to talk to people about their experiences with horses," says Brian Ladurantaye. He gets up to break a large carrot into three pieces and feed it to the horses, as he bids them goodbye until the evening feed.

A few days later, around ten o'clock on the night of May 12th, Lady gave birth to a filly. She'll be called Sovereign.

For anyone interested in joining the Haliburton County Horsemen's Association, the telephone number is 286 2088.

The family membership fee is $10 a year and covers the cost of ten news letters annually.

ALL DAY ATHLETES: Grade 6 student Alan Pugh competes in the high jump at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School's Field Day. Grade 6, 7 and 8 students took part in the all-day track and field events, an annual meet designed to promote fun in sports as well as competition.

Home Show draws big crowd

The Dysart arena and the Haliburton Curling Club thronged with visitors throughout the weekend, taking in the displays of more than a hundred exhibitors at the 15th annual Home and Vacation Show. Rain on Saturday helped bring people in to check out a wide array of locally available goods and services.

Canadians face reality of a new Russia

Haliburton family brings spiritual aid to a country in turmoil

by ANDREW MEESON
Staff Reporter

WHEN THE DUNCOMBE FAMILY flew to Russia in February, they went to help the Baha'i religious community. But first they had to come to terms with the more secular problems of living in that chaotic country.

"We agreed before we left that Lon would help with the laundry," says Lynn Duncombe of her husband. But he hadn't bargained on how much time the chore could take doing it by hand in the bathtub. "The first night it took six hours, the second day it took three hours."

That did it.

"The next day he went out with Anton, our Russian guide, and bought a washing machine."

The Duncombes were staying in Yekaterinburg in the heart of Russia's industrial Ural region, a place previously known for turning out military hardware. The hefty appliance "weighed a ton" and was apparently built to withstand enemy bombardment.

"We joked that it was made out of tank parts," chuckles Mr. Duncombe.

While converting military hardware into washing machines isn't exactly turning swords into plowshares, it is typical of the new realities of the former Soviet empire, which has changed in many other ways as well.

As Baha'is themselves, the Duncombes were encouraged and somewhat surprised by the strength of spiritual feelings in a country ruled by an ideology openly hostile to religion for the last 70 years.

Baha'is lived in Russia before the revolution, but were persecuted and dispersed across the country during this century. Now they are flourishing and experiencing "growing pains," according to the Duncombes.

Even philosophers who taught Marxist religious history for years are counted as converts to the faith, which Mr. Duncombe finds both fascinating and unique to the country.

"Communism certainly ground them down," says Mr. Duncombe. "But they just sprang back up."

Both Duncombes point encouragingly to the condition of the churches which have been restored, thanks largely to foreign donations. "The public buildings would be falling apart, but the churches would look beautiful."

As Baha'is, the Duncombes helped the Russian members, correcting translations of the faith's teachings and instructing the converts about fundamental religious concepts.

"Parents wanted to teach their children about God, but didn't know how," explains Mrs. Duncombe. To overcome linguistic and spiritual difficulties, she used images, like the sun and its rays to represent God and his messengers.

Lon Duncombe's additional worldly duties for the Canadian Co-operative Association dovetailed with this spiritual dimension. He studied the possibility of setting up a co-operative system, similar to Canada's.

A central tenet of Baha'i faith is using consultation to solve problems. Consultation was alien to Soviet farmers.

The Soviet farming industry had collective farms purporting to be based on consultative principles, but, Mr. Duncombe found this to not be the case. "They called them co-operatives, but they took orders from Moscow. They had no experience in consultation."

His work is not yet completed. The family's scheduled four-month visit having been cut short by the death of his father, but he is trying to return this fall, alone.

Having a family in a foreign country has its own special problems, especially with schooling. "I'm in the eighth grade, but there I was put in the seventh grade because of the time schedule," says the 16-year-old Amanda. "But it didn't really matter a lot, because I realized how advanced they were."

In math, for example, the Russian students were tackling algebra in the second form. Amanda's class was doing physics and biology in the seventh form. As a result, Amanda and her brother Ian, 11, attended classes at 2 p.m. each day for a few hours, but spent most of their time at the sports facilities swimming, or speaking to Russian classes about Canada. Lynn Duncombe said they kept up with their classmates back home by applying themselves to the homework they had brought with them from Haliburton.

All members of the family display a form of obsession common to travelers from Russia — a preoccupation with prices of items sold in Canada and Russia. They can all pinpoint the price of various products and do the exchange rate in their heads. All, except 8-year-old Claire, had been to the country last year, giving them a means of comparison.

Pepsi, according to Amanda, had gone up from seven rubles last year, to 200 rubles this year. Snickers chocolate bars, which their friends called "Sneakers", cost an extravagant 200 rubles, equivalent to their weekly allowance, Mr. Duncombe adds.

If this seems outrageously expensive, keep in mind the exchange rate is about 800 rubles to the dollar.

Food supplies were a chronic problem under the Soviet regime, producing some peculiar shopping habits in its people. While supplies have improved, however slowly, old habits dies hard.

Mr. Duncombe remembers when cheese one day showed up on the shelves. "We were short of cheese for a while. Then, when the cheese came in, Anton saw them carrying in 10 or 20 kg blocks. We went out and bought two of them so we had enough."

"We were hacking away at cheese for about two months. You'd have to stock up on whatever was available"

Accommodations remain less than what most North Americans have come to expect. The entire Duncombe family lived in a two-bedroom apartment with their landlady. But as comfortable as it was, apartments in Russia are a far cry from spacious Haliburton farmhouses.

While world attention seems focused on the machinations of the politicians in Moscow to the exclusion of all else, people in Yekaterinburg, which is about two days by train from the capital, had little interest in such things as the referendum on Yeltsin's reforms. "Most people said it didn't make any difference," says Mr. Duncombe.

Like many in the West, older Russians are pessimistic and cynical about the future, perhaps understandably, given the profound changes they have witnessed and the relatively stable existence, now gone, that some had enjoyed under the old system. "If I said 'The economy will improve', they would say 'What century?'"

Desperation for solutions to their problems has led some to wax nostalgic over their pre-revolutionary past.

Yekaterinburg is famous for being the place where Lenin imprisoned the last tsar, Nicholas and his family, until they were executed.

The concrete cross marking the location of their deaths has become a sort of shrine. "All the local people get married there now instead of city hall or in front of Lenin's statue," he says. "There are also plans to build a gorgeous cathedral there."

Another remnant of Russia's glorious past is the abundance of high quality cultural events. Opera, classical and folk concerts were all readily available in Yekaterinburg, as the arts remain heavily subsidized by the state. Mr. Duncombe remembers seeing a production of Puccini's opera Tosca at a local theatre, which offered a steady stream of productions. "There was something different almost every night."

And, he adds, "it was cheaper than a chocolate bar."

— if not to provide — and took literally months to get approved on a test basis through the many layers of big city bureaucracy. It was overwhelmingly endorsed by all those who used it and even by council for the French entrepreneur to begin installing more of them — until:

Some militant handicapped organization declared that, under Federal law, they were illegal because they were not wheelchair-accessible. Making them meet these rules would have made them too large to go on the street corners (they are already about the size of a Toronto bus shelter).

A secondary problem was that the development cost of the whole stainless steel room and automated equipment was covered by the Paris operation, with units available and ready to go. The inventor was, however, willing to undertake to develop a wheelchair-accessible model, for use in areas where he could get approvals for a larger unit.

The builder proposed to start serving the needs of New Yorkers so he could begin to recoup some of the costs of his experiments, while he developed this new unit. NO WAY, said the militant handicapped group — nobody gets to go until we get our way!

And that's the "politically correct" status of things in New York City right now, as far as I know — with the same lack of services as we find in Haliburton. At least it won't kill anyone...

In case you think that's an impossibility, may I refer to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling of just three weeks ago, when they left intact a lower court judgement for a payment of $1.5 million to the widow of a Chicago man who was killed in 1977.

It seems that Sag Yeul Lee, who was a Korean immigrant and couldn't read English, got caught short while on a visit to Washington D.C. — and urinated on the electrified third rail of the city's rapid-transit system, receiving a fatal shock.

His widow sued the transit authority, saying they had failed to properly guard the third rail, and ended up with the $1.5 million the lower court awarded.

I could, umm, take a shot at a closing line, but I think I'll pass...

here.") I'll come back. I'll send friends.

I personally hate going to restaurants where you have to stand up and wave frantically to get attention. I hate having to hunt through a store to find a clerk, only to end up with someone who won't look me in the eye, and gives off the strong message that you should go away, and stop bothering them, they were partying last night and need some sleep.

Any establishment, be it a gift shop or an inn, that wants to create an air of class, and attract a richer clientele, had better be sure their staff reflects that image. "What'll youse have?" might pass at a diner, but if you're serving French Cuisine, and charging prices to match, you really could afford to give your help an English lesson.

Tourists ask a lot of questions. "Where can I find . . . ?" and, "What is there to do?" They deserve answers. Friendly answers. A good business person could keep track of coming events. Even post them. If they can't personally give directions, they could send them to a place that can.

If it's true that we're in for another cool summer, let's not grouse about it. Let's make it work for us. Just think of it as environmentally friendly air-conditioning.

Our tourist friend from Don Mills may come back for Canada Day. It might be the last chance we'll have to change her impression. So smile, darn ya, smile! And, as she walks back out the door, thank her for shopping/eating in Haliburton, and invite her to please come again.

A true original
To the Editor:

I was saddened to hear about the sudden death of long-time Echo advertising manager Creighton Feir.

Since leaving the Echo I've met many new people, but only a select few have been as unique as Creighton Feir.

C.B. Feir was a true original whose wit and charm endeared him to anyone who has the good fortune to know him, including your truly. (He's the only person I've met who could refer to women as "broads" without raising an eyebrow).

I still smile when I think about the talks we used to share after the latest edition of the Echo was put to "bed" and everybody else had gone home.

To this day when deadline approaches at the present newspaper I work for, I can still hear Creighton saying "Are we ever going to get this paper out?"

My deepest sympathy goes out to his family and my old friends at the Echo. Take care.

Respectfully yours,
Brian Rodnick,

THE EVOLUTION OF BARK LAKE

By Linda Shutt

THE LAKE IS still pristine. The trees stand in an unbroken flow around its shore, no cottages gash the water's edge to mar its purity. Bark Lake looks today much as it would have looked to the first hunters and lumber men who came to the area a century ago.

But nestled in the trees on the southern shore, at the 45-year-old Bark Lake Leadership Centre, much is changing.

Since a provincial review of the camp's purpose and operation was completed in 1988, Bark Lake has been gradually undergoing a metamorphosis aimed at taking it into the next century as a viable leadership centre for the province.

This year the centre is making the most dramatic break with its past since the camp went co-educational in the 1960s.

For the first time the provincially-funded camp will be charging a fee for its courses, a move Bark Lake director Rob Hemming described as putting the camp in "the leadership business."

"Five years ago we recognized the need to expand our concept of the centre. We need to be more community-based. We can no longer depend on others (for funding)."

The fee plan goes hand in hand with an expansion of the adult leadership training program. Adult training will now make up 40 per cent of the courses offered at Bark Lake and, said Hemming, will help to subsidize the youth programs that have traditionally been the backbone of the Bark Lake concept.

The centre's mission is to develop leadership qualities in people who will use their experience at Bark Lake to develop environmental, recreational and tourist programs in their own communities.

Bark Lake now has a campus of more than 70 buildings on 320 acres of developed land. It's part of the 4,000 acres owned by the province for the use of Bark Lake visitors. A million-dollar adult learning centre has just been completed, and this summer construction will start on a new, $1.4-million sewage and water system that will be finished by next spring.

Hemming, who has been director since 1986, said the revised programs reflect the changes taking place in Canadian communities. Multiculturalism, community development and co-operative leadership are now all part of the Bark Lake curriculum, and the groups demanding those programs will now be accommodated year-round by the structural improvements.

BACK in 1947, the resounding silence of the forest around Bark Lake was broken only by hunters who used the small, log hunting lodge that still stands near the southern shore. Two smaller cabins were built nearby for overflow guests. The hunters' buildings are now used by the Bark Lake Leadership Centre as activity areas.

In an atmosphere of hope that followed the end of World War II, the provincial government bought the site and surrounding land for $8,200 and began to develop a camp for teenage boys; boys who would lead Canada into a new era through leadership in their communities.

The camp was open for only two months a year, July and August, and life there reflected the traditional view of the Canadian north.

"Back then we didn't even have showers," said Dallyn Pickens, who was the camp's site manager for its first 30 years. "But it was a happy place, a fantastic place to work. I have often said there were more tears shed in the parking lot at Bark Lake than anywhere in the county. But they were happy tears. People took away a little bit of the Bark Lake spirit."

In the early days the hunting lodge served as a kitchen and dining room for the boys, and courses concentrated on mastering the outdoor life as a means to self-development. Early photos now hanging on the walls of the new, million-dollar dining-hall which opened in 1991, show teenage boys struggling to pitch tents in the middle of an uncleared, wooded area near the lake.

In winter, Pickens had to snowshoe the three miles in to the camp from the Irondale road (now the 503) to clear snow off the roofs.

In the 1950s a road was built into the camp and a new kitchen, an infirmary and girls quarters were added, although the boys and girls courses were run on different weeks.

The 1960s brought electricity, showers and new cabins. And co-education.

The programs expanded along with the building site. Many of the early programs catered to youths who were often on the short end of the law. The camp's attempt to develop their leadership skills was a means of getting them back on track. By the 1970s Bark Lake was being used by groups like the Ontario Junior Farmers, which sent representatives from 42 Ontario counties to learn leadership skills.

Non-profit organizations like the YMCA, and churches and schools, were sponsoring potential youth leaders for week-long courses that developed leadership skills through outdoor activities that ranged from canoeing to crafts.

As governments and their policies changed, Bark Lake Leadership Centre was run by a variety of ministries, from Education to Social Services. Despite recessions and government belt-tightening at various times over the years, the Bark Lake Leadership Centre was able to maintain the support of the provincial government, mainly because of the determination and dedication of its staff. It is now under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Culture, Tourism and Recreation.

Richard Devenney, now a lawyer with Keyser, Mason, Ball and Lewis in Mississauga, spent most of 12 summers at the camp when his father, Hartland, was director of Bark Lake from 1956 to 1968.

"I was the camp brat. I hung around with Dallyn Pickens and the maintenance staff. They taught me canoeing and how to catch snapping turtles - and they were big turtles," said Devenney.

He said the camp taught him about the natural world, a lesson he recalls today as a father.

"It influenced me greatly. I developed a comfort with the outdoors. With snakes and fish and bugs and bears. One year the kitchen was invaded every night by five or six bears. Learning about the natural world encouraged me to buy a farm (near Napanee) to let my own son experience it."

Devenney is one of six founding members of the Friends of Bark Lake Association that formed last year. Its mandate calls for it to act in an independent, supportive role to help guide the camp through its most recent policy revisions.

Former staff members and alumni will work through the Friends to help develop new programs and work as fundraisers. A Friends shop has opened at the centre, selling shirts, caps and other memorabilia to visitors.

Devenney says the changes at Bark Lake are a natural evolution for a public facility, an evolution that will allow it to cater to the needs of new organizations.

Pickens, too, said he thinks the recent changes are a necessity arising from government cut backs in funding and the changing times.

He said he wasn't worried Bark Lake would lose the spirit that has driven it for 45 years — "I think we may have lost a certain amount when it went co-ed" — but he worries that charging people to come to the camp will exclude some groups.

"Bark Lake has had a lot of kids come from schools in the city, young kids who had never seen a lake. They would often have trouble raising the money to travel here, now they have to pay accommodation as well," said Pickens.

LYNDA Shadbolt, marketing and program co-ordinator at Bark Lake, is one of the new generation of staff at Bark Lake. She's worked at the centre since 1988 and has been involved in much of the planning and design of the new buildings that have helped expand the camp into a year-round educational centre.

The newest building, the adult learning centre, hasn't been opened officially but has been in use since last fall. Like the other new buildings, it sits discreetly among the pine trees, itself a pine-covered structure, broken by large glass windows that give a view of the lake.

Its interior is a melding of wood, stone and natural colours that reflect its location. The walls are decorated with pictures of Canadian wildlife and birds.

Even when the adult learning centre is unoccupied, as it was in mid-May, the rooms are welcoming and comfortable. It sleeps 48 people in two wings, divided by a common lounge area dominated by two stone fireplaces.

There are no phones, no televisions, no air conditioning.

"The design of the building reflects our environmental philosophy here," said Shadbolt. "And the lack of distractions allows residents to get away and concentrate on their program."

A range of market areas — from environmental to cultural leadership — have significantly broadened the scope of the Bark Lake programs.

Multiculturalism is now an important part of the mix of programs. The second and third generation of immigrants to Canada with other cultural backgrounds want to enjoy the mix of Canadian culture. Heming said Bark Lake is teaching a community lifestyle, based on a strong belief in the environment and respect for natural resources.

The Bark Lake environment provides a vehicle for potential leaders to develop their skills in a place that, through example, promotes a healthy, active lifestyle.

Adult leadership training caters to everything from seniors club leaders to child care instructors. Last month a group of Ontario township representatives occupied the adult learning centre for a course that focused on community economic improvement.

Leaders in Canadian communities now have to work with a broad spectrum of people, Heming said.

They need the ability to understand other views. How to deal with hundreds of points of view."

He said the centre promotes an understanding of other people's viewpoints through consensus leadership.

"At Bark Lake we develop a leader's ability to understand the other side of an issue."

But the recent changes haven't been without controversy.

Shadbolt said some of the more than 500 organizations who use the camp have voiced their concern over the change to a fee-based program.

"Some of them feel they shouldn't pay. They used to be able to send four or five people from their organization at no cost. We've had quite a few phone calls and we are trying to help them with suggestions on fund-raising."

Bark Lake gets $850,000 annually from the province. There are five full-time staff and as many as 70 staff hired on a contract basis to lead programs through the year.

The Centre can accommodate as many as 200 visitors at a time and expects to take in between $200,000 to $250,000 annually from course fees. Young people between 15- and 18-years-old will be charged $30 a day for their course and accommodation. Fees for adults will range between $50 and $70 depending on the level of accommodation they select. The camp is now offering one-day courses, although most programs run from three days to two weeks.

ADULTS ONLY: Bark Lake program specialist Valerie Bishop in the newly-opened adult learning centre. It provides accommodation for 48 adults, kitchenettes and a communal meeting area. The wood, the stone and earth tones used in the centre complement the outdoor themes that are still a part of the Bark Lake experience.

There are now three types of programming. Direct service programs are designed and implemented at Bark Lake by its own personnel. Collaborative projects offer visiting organizations a chance to participate in a program design that will cater to the specific needs of their own leadership. The third category — support services — allows groups to develop and run their own programs at the Centre, with personnel support from the staff.

Although people with a history at the camp, people like Dallyn Pickens and Richard Devenney, support the changes at Bark Lake, Heming acknowledges that he has heard some criticism of the money being spent at Bark Lake.

It has benefited from a government infusion of $5-million over five years for capital improvements.

But he said he has trouble with critics who don't appreciate the effect the changes have had on the economy.

SIR SANDFORD FLEMING TURNS 25

On a gloriously sunny Sunday, kids and their parents turned out at the Norman A. Sisco Campus to celebrate Sir Sandford Fleming College's 25th anniversary. Barb Bolin, the director of the Haliburton campus, buried a time capsule filled with t-shirts, newspapers, computer disks and art objects. The capsule will actually be on display in the college and will be cracked open in another 25 years.

Washboard Hank Fisher entertained the crowd with his original and unique instruments and songs.

Hydro Incentives Survive Budget

Good news for those who need to reduce their heating costs. Ontario Hydro can still provide assistance to qualified applicants for new home construction or for existing homes changing from electric heating to a ground source heating system (EARTH FURNACE SYSTEM). The incentives will provide loans at reduced rates, presently 4%, and rebates up to $1,500. Anyone who is heating with an electric system would be well advised to take advantage of these incentives before they expire in October. The EARTH FURNACE SYSTEM draws heating and air conditioning energy directly from the land. There are no wells to drill, no water to pump, store or discharge. You have an "oil well" in your backyard, why not use it?

HIGHLANDS HEATING is the authorized dealer for EARTH FURNACE SYSTEMS. They can help you with the incentive papers, do heat loss studies and show you the tremendous savings achievable by the use of an EARTH FURNACE.

Local artisans' work will be displayed at new gallery in pioneer's home

Dorset
Phyllis Briscoe - 766-2237

June birthdays to be celebrated include Vi Elms, Jack Clayton, Brad Robinson, Ila Griffin and Courtney Morris. We wish them all many happy returns.

Happy birthday to George Moore on May 29. Our own Brianna, Karen and Dave McKey's girl, is all of six years old on May 31. We wish her lots of love and happiness.

We have a new gift shop opening in Dorset, the Greenaway Gallery which will be opening the end of June. They will be specializing in hand crafts and art work, paintings, pottery and ceramics and other crafts done by local artisans.

The Gallery is located in the house behind the Post Office which has been renovated. This is one of the older homes in Dorset and the first occupants that I remember was the W. Sparks family, whom I think may have been the original owners as they were a pioneer family and owned and operated a general store in the village, the store being long gone. We wish Grace the best in her endeavor.

Many were saddened to learn of the sudden death of Archdeacon Ross Kreager, who with his wife Muriel, operated Emmaus in Baysville. The couple were holidaying in England where Muriel's family live, when Ross was suddenly stricken. Our sympathy is extended to Muriel, family and friends.

A delightful baby shower was held at the home of Joyce McKey in honour of Melanie Rose Grauds, Peter and Lori's daughter, born April 15. Many lovely gifts were presented to the young lady and the buffet table was a thing of beauty. Co-hostesses with Joyce were Esther Balestrin, Greta Bacher and Karen Knutt.

Am I chicken? wimpy? Or just plain cowardly? The 24th has come and gone and I haven't taken the plunge into the invigorating (frigid) waters of Lake of Bays. I have no legitimate excuse. I don't have a cold, I did have some dental problems but my dentist soon cleared those up, I am hale and hearty but I guess just plain chicken. When the water temperature is 13 Celsius, in English about 56 it is a bit daunting. Oh well, I don't see any of the younger fry in either.

Visitors at the Dorset Senior Club recently were Kate Reid and Don Shortreed, members of the Haliburton County Directional Planning Board. The subject was the possibility of a Senior Citizen's apartment facility eventually being located in the Dorset area. Don and Kate enlightened the club members as to the commitment, hard work and diligence of individuals in a group to get such a project off the ground. The information that Don and Kate passed on was greatly appreciated and was perceived as being very useful. The project will be discussed further at a later date.

The Lake of Bays council sponsored a volunteer appreciation day at the Dwight Community on Sunday, May 13. Julie Madden, Director of Parks and Recreation, organized the event. Volunteers who had contributed their time and effort to the success of local organizations were given recognition and presented with awards. The new Recreation Centre auditorium was practically filled with an estimated 175 attending. After the awards, slides were shown and refreshments served.

Congratulations to Julie Madden for a job well done.

Welcome to Jack and Bea Watts to their summer home on Grindstone Lake. They have been summer residents on the lake for a number of years and are well known in the community.

A group of ladies from St. Mary Magdalenes attended a Muskoka Deanery A C Luncheon meeting as guests of Kearney A C W Ladies. The meeting was held at the lovely Kearney Recreation Centre and there were 91 present, coming from all over Muskoka.

Lunch was served after which Sister Mary Cartwright who has Maison Dieu, a retreat home in Bracebridge, gave a delightful talk which everyone enjoyed.

H.H. - To make perfectly shaped patties, save a few plastic lids from cottage or sour cream containers. Full the lids evenly with your Hamburg mixture, stack them and put in a plastic bag. If frozen, they come apart easily.

Senior League
Winnifred Barnum - 286-2140

On the 24th of May long weekend there were quite a few visitors in to see their relatives and friends. My family May and Roy Cameron and their daughter Jackie came and took me for a drive and we had our supper out.

Sunday Anita Smith read to us for the last time before fall and Stella Burke read later in the afternoon.

Rev. John Burgess held the Chapel Service Sunday evening and Lorna Roland played the organ. Both are sincerely appreciated. Monday was very quiet.

Louise Leonard led the Chapel Service.

Dottie Muirhead had crafts in the afternoon and we composed poems. Its surprising what a person can do if you put your mind to it.

In the evening we played euchre with the help of Corinne Arsenault.

Wednesday, under the guidance of Pearl Cowen, games of euchre, crokinole and cribbage were organized in the auditorium with the help of Mabel Deacon, Jeanne Sears, Carrie Drysdale, Freda Hulbig and Kathy Wood and of course Doris. We had an enjoyable afternoon and thank those responsible.

There was a tea party and birthday party on Thursday. The Hyland Crest Auxiliary presented the birthday people with a beautiful cake. They were Corinne Bonneville, Beatrice Britain, Myrtle O'Halloran, Alice Rivers, Jean Taylor, Lorne Fry and Marshall Harrison. Happy Birthday to all.

The lovely tea and program was supplied by the Harcourt Chapel Crossroads children while the ladies prepared the tea the children put on a program. Daniel Pothaar played the piano. O Canada was sung and grace was said followed by O'Wheel. A year old dog doing some smart tricks. The students choir sang several numbers and Mrs. Burt sang a solos and a duet with one of the older girls. Tea was served by the ladies. It was a happy afternoon and we all thank you very much for coming so far to entertain us.

Friday, May 28 our Pen Pals from grade five and their teachers were invited to Hyland Crest auditorium for a barbecue luncheon and to meet their Sr. Pen Pals of the last year. Each student or Pen Pal was presented with a souvenir pencil made by the residents. Molly McCarthy was presented with a shelf for knick-nacks decorated and finished by Winnifred Barnum, for the very hard work she has done for us during the school term. The presentations were made by Alice Todd. Molly was also presented with a gift of a small glass, shaped like a heart, full of bathe beads, from the pupils. Grade five also presented Hyland Crest residents with a $25. donation for our Tub Fund and were thanked nicely by Alice Todd. The pupils put on a small program of square dancing, karate demo, piano solos, as well as doing the Achey Breaky. It was enjoyed by all.

Not the last was hard work of the kitchen staff who prepared the hot dogs, hamburgers and ice cream. We sincerely thank them for their efforts to make this a success.

Later that afternoon the Grandfathers 4 came and entertained for the rest of the afternoon. I am sure everyone appreciated their music. Though Mothers Day has come and gone I want to correct my item on Mothers Day. I am very sorry about leaving out a very important item. On Mothers Day Pearl Cowan, Dottie Muirhead and Nancy Gallant came to Hyland Crest and pinned beautiful corsages on each mother here. The corsages were all made by Nancy Gallant. Even if I omitted this in my column we all were delighted with them and thank Nancy and helpers.

Ancestors are remembered

Vice President Jean Cox convened the May 19 meeting of Minden Women's Institute at the Library Cultural Centre. She welcomed all and 13 members answered the Roll call by showing something memorable of their ancestors.

Regular reports were given. A letter requesting volunteers by the Gallery for setting up for Art Festival July 3 & 4 was read and several members offered as Mary Cox for Friday night and Mary Wilson Sunday afternoon.

No one was able to attend the Bury's Green Branch 40th Anniversary on May 20. Drivers Jean Cox and Mary Cox made donation of their mileage to the District Annual at Burnt River Centre. Irene Moore gave report of sending 16 cards since the last meeting and collections for Card Fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken and a card sent around for Jean Lacey who was just home from hospital.

Most members had turned in their aprons and others should bring these to the next meeting. The Planning meeting for Programs for 1993-94 will be June 2 at 10 a.m. a Jean Cox's home for Executive and Convenors. It was decided to have two bake sales this summer on Main Street, Friday July 2 and August 6, both at 10 a.m. The Tweedmuir Tea will be planned for September. A Fair exhibit and perhaps a bus trip will be planned at the next meeting. Joyce Hewitt also will carry on with her current events for this year.

Cardiff wins tourney

Wilberforce

Flo Elliott - 448-2618

Thanks to Bob Park, owner of the I.G.A. (not manager as I said in another article) for hiring boys to pick up garbage between his store and the Wilberforce dump, on May 29, this is a distance of several miles and the boys were able to deliver full bags of garbage to the dump. This served two purposes, it helped the boys and it was excellent for the environment. Great idea.

Also on May 27 Bob Park treated the children and mom's at Wilberforce Play School to lunch. Some children dressed for the occasion as little chefs. There were games and treats for all. The Moms would like to thank Bob again for this nice treat.

Tuesday May 28 the Senior's Games Carpet Bowling was held in Wilberforce. Eight teams participated, and it took all day to complete the schedule. Congratulations to the winners all from Cardiff, I'm afraid. The first place team was Laverne Newman and Art Tomsett. Art is 88 years old, and it was a pleasure to see him compete. He had to play three games straight in the finals and he seemed fresh as a daisy when he finished. Betty Burke (Spruce St.) and Luella Smith came in second, and Betty Burke (Pine St.) and Goldie Vardy came in third. The games were well run by Jim Wilke and Frank Peischl of Cardiff. Perhaps next year we will have better luck. Everyone enjoyed the day.

There will be a session of the Active Living Program in Cardiff on June 11, in the Community Centre. It will cover such topics as myths of aging: "Age is no Barrier". Program design team test. Program promotion, legal liability, safety concerns for participants, emergency safety, body mass index; lots of things to learn at this one. People who are participating are very pleased with the program.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the Scott family of Wilberforce at the loss of their family member Aileen, who passed away on Sunday May 31. Our prayers are especially with the two sons, Larry and Roger, as it has been only eight months since they lost their father.

Fifty dollars plus a cash donation was raised for the sound system at "Looney Night" on June 3. Everyone enjoyed the movie of the Geritol Follies and the coffee and goodies that were served at the half way mark. Many thanks to Joan and Gordon Clark for a very pleasant evening.

Congratulations to the Legion on the success of their annual Zone Community of the Ladies auxiliary that was held on Sunday May 30 at the Lloyd Watson Centre. I hear there were about 150 members present for lunch.

The Senior's club hope to hold a Canada Day service in front of the Lloyd Watson Centre on July 1st at 11 o'clock. The Heritage Guild and the Legion will be assisting. Please come out and try to make this an annual event to be proud of, in our small village.

Extendicare welcomes new female resident

Extendicare

John Menzies

June 7, 1993: We extend a warm welcome to a new resident at Extendicare, are Alma Morrison, and we hope her stay will be long and happy.

The crafts group was busy again this week making pom poms for the summer festivities.

The highlight of the Monday was the Country Boys, come to entertain. Beth Creary joined Betty Inglis in dancing with the residents.

On Tuesday Betty Salvatori led the residents in Bible Study.

Volunteers again help make Bingo a success each week for residents.

On Wednesday, residents went to Kawartha Dairy for ice cream. Each trip in spring brings new colours for the residents to see and appreciate.

I stayed at Extendicare after Men's Club to watch the Pastoral Care Committee of the Haliburton United Church serve Tea. For those who attended, Mary Brown, Dorothy Way, Jan Shipley, Elenor Holmes, Mary Packard, Helen Campbell, and Art

Vandergrift, it was more than just volunteer assignment.

Besides the singing and dancing and piano playing and cake serving, there was a real opportunity to renew friendships and meet new people. Volunteers also get to meet each other in a truly different setting.

Such are the benefits of volunteerism.

It is with sorrow, that the residents and staff at Extendicare announce the passing of Jean Codata and Mini Eastman. They will both be missed.

On Friday Rev. Paul Benson led the residents in the Church Service.

Response is overwhelming

CHACE

Sue Valm - 457-2989

It's so nice to be a part of a caring community! Like many other businesses and community services, C.H.A.C.E. Inc. is embracing the challenge of reduced spending and more importantly, creative fund raising. One recent fund raising attempt has been to secure the financial support of local businesses, by becoming either a co-sponsor at the cost of $75 or a sole sponsor at the cost of $150, businesses can contribute towards the cost of one month's art and programming supplies at either of our Resource Centres. Only two weeks into our campaign, our response has been overwhelming! We recognize that some businesses have "dug deep" in order to support our valuable service and our gratitude is heartfelt. Our warmest thanks to the Haliburton Guardian Drug Store and an anonymous donor who have so generously sponsored the costs of the craft and programming supplies at our Haliburton and Minden Resource centres for the month of May!

Each May and June sees C.H.A.C.E. Inc. run its annual Babysitters' Training Course. Thanks to the generous efforts of everyone involved in teaching and facilitating this year's course, over 60 young students will receive valuable instruction in the care, safety and well-being of young children. This year's response suggests to us that a semi-annual course might be warranted. If you have a child who will be 12 by December 1 of this year who would be interested in enrolling in a fall course, please call Sue Doan at C.H.A.C.E. at 457-2989 to indicate so. I look forward to releasing the names of this spring's graduates some time next month!

Also at this time each year C.H.A.C.E. Inc. adds to its roster of volunteers. The 1993/94 Board of Directors are: Gord Schakelaar, President; Laurie Brown, Vice-President; Francis Marshall, Treasurer; Jan McMaster, Secretary; Jude King; Elaine Muenzel; Linda Porter; Kirsti Reynolds; Andrea Roberts; Heather Valentine; and John Winsley. On behalf of all our C.H.A.C.E. families and our staff, I extend a most sincere thank you to our Board of Directors. Without your local volunteer efforts, organizations like C.H.A.C.E. just wouldn't exist. Thanks so much!

At our Annual General Meeting of May 13, the C.H.A.C.E. membership accepted a new mission statement for C.H.A.C.E. Inc. Although not varying significantly from our former one, our new mission statement captures more thoroughly all that C.H.A.C.E. strives to achieve. Specifically, "C.H.A.C.E. Inc. is a non-profit, multi-service agency which strives to offer a broad spectrum of supports to families in Haliburton County by providing supports beneficial to children receiving informal child care, licensed centre-based care, licensed private home child care and care from within their own family unit." To this end, we operate two Family Resource Centres, a licensed Day Care Centre and a licensed Private Home Day Care network. For information on any of our services, please feel free to call us at 457-2989.

DAYS GONE BY: Grade 3 students at Hodgson Elementary School spent last Wednesday at the Haliburton County museum learning about the way pioneers did things. Here, Tom Ballantine shows how to make metal hooks on a smith's forge.

Local bike rodeo teaches safe riding

by CLEVE ROBERTS
Haliburton Police Support Association

IN ONE YEAR 59 children under the age of 15 died in bicycle accidents, and at least 6,034 children were injured as well that year in Canada." Spring has finally sprung, and as children dust off their bicycles and tune them up for yet another busy summer, your Haliburton Police Support Association is offering an opportunity for them to test their safety knowledge and bicycle handling skills.

"Right Riders" is a national bicycle safety education program sponsored by H.P.S.A., and endorsed by the O.P.P. The program is designed for elementary school children between five and twelve years of age. The program is aimed at providing young cyclists instruction and creating awareness of the rules of the road, thereby preventing many tragic and senseless bicycle related accidents.

Children see an eight minute National Bike Test video and then participate in a bike rodeo. Bike rodeos are designed to specifically test bicycle handling skills and knowledge of basic rules of the road. A course laid out on pavement tests each bicycle rider's handling skills in balancing, turning, stopping and performing visual checks. Each rider is also monitored on recognition of road traffic signs.

The rodeo is open to children from kindergarten to Grade 6 and is Free of Charge. Each participant is eligible for one of several bicycle helmets, sweatshirts and medals.

The program includes a mechanical safety check of your child's bicycle.

Come out and join us for an hour at Victoria Street School on Sunday, June 13, from 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m. (Please note rain date - Sunday, June 20, 1993 from 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.)

400 IN MEMORIAM

DEAN, GEORGE - In memory of a dear husband and father, who passed away June 3, 1990.
A page in our book of memories
Silently turns today Ever remembered by wife Laura and daughter Lorraine.

HORSLEY, GARTH LEROY -
In loving memory of our dear husband, father and poppa, who passed away June 12, 1991.
There's a bridge of golden memories
From here to heaven above,
It keeps you very close to us
It's called the bridge of love.
Every day no matter where Deep in our hearts you are always there,
Forget you, we never will
You left a place no one can fill,
Our love for you will always keep
It cannot fade, it lies too deep.
Forever loved, so sadly missed, by wife Shirley, children - Judy, Jay, Dawn, Michele and Susan, their spouses and grandchildren.

In memory of a loving Mother and Grandmother, Mary Robertson.
June 2, 1985. Karen, Don, Andrew, James, Jonathan.

SIMS, ELSIE - In loving memory of a dear mother Elsie, who passed away June 7, 1989.
Gone is the face we loved so dear.
Silent is the voice we loved to hear.
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember her who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
Today, tomorrow, our whole life
through,
We'll always love and remember
you.
Sadly missed by Helen and Ross.

SIMS, ELSIE (TOOTS) - In loving memory of a dear mother, who passed away June 7, 1989.
Until the stars have lost their sparkle,
And the sun refuses to shine,
Until the flowers fail to bloom,
You will always be on our mind.
Until time stops ticking
And the skies are emptied of blue,
Until our heart stops beating,
We will always love and remember
you.
Sadly missed by Shirley, Sandy and Terry.
